... Ann Landers

If you should need another letter supporting your position, here it is: I underwent psycho-therapeutic treatment two years ago and have been standing on my own two feet for over a year. And I am getting stronger every day.

I went into treatment with the fixed notion that the only answer to my problem was a divorce. I learned through therapy that my problem was within myself, not my marriage.

I expected perfection from marriage—a fantasy I had built up from childhood fairy tales. At no time did my psychiatrist suggest divorce. He did suggest that I be more realistic. He didn't wreck my marriage. He saved it.

A person seeking help through psychiatry must WANT to be helped. He must accept responsibility for himself. If he is still floundering after eight years, he should find another doctor. Speaking for myself I can truthfully say, psychiatry saved my life.

—LIVING PROOF
Dear Living Proof: I've received many letters on the subject and they are running about 70 per cent for and 30 per cent against. Thanks for yours—it's one of the best.
